

Hilda Mulrooney is a Registered Dietitian with a PhD in Nutrition. She currently works as a Senior Lecturer in Nutrition at Kingston University in London, having previously held dietetic posts within the NHS in public health, primary care & secondary care. She is an active committee member of the Obesity Group of the British Dietetic Association (formerly domUK), and is Consultations Officer for the group. She develops responses from the group to a range of national consultations, including NICE. She is also a member of the Royal College of Physicians Advisory Group on Weight and Health, and has been a committee member of the European Specialist Dietitians Network for Obesity since 2014.